Dogs Alert Cyclist to Save Man

Two dogs barking along the C&O Canal Towpath near Little Falls dam caught the attention of a bicyclist. After a man got stuck in mud near the Potomac River, his two dogs, leashes still attached, got the attention of a cyclist. The dogs’ owner was out of sight 50 yards away but the dogs barked incessantly until the cyclist found the man and alerted Montgomery County Fire and Rescue.

Around 2:30 p.m., Monday, fire and rescue received the 911 call for a technical rescue of a man stuck in the mud between Lock 6 and Lock 10. Fire and Rescue and the swift water rescue headed out on ATVs and boats, and after some time looking were able to find the man, still accompanied by the cyclist, about 50 yards from the towpath.

“This is a real cat’s meow & dog gone good stuff. ... Who let the Dogs Out,” PIO Piringer tweeted. “The dogs saved the day.”

The man was playing fetch with his two dogs, throwing a stick into the river. He apparently ventured onto the mud to retrieve a stick and then sank and got stuck.

The dogs stayed in his general area but went up near the towpath barking continuously. The cyclist noticed the dogs still with their leashes on and stopped to see what was going on. It was then that he heard the man calling for help in the distance. Because it was a wooded area, the man was not immediately visible, and without the dogs good work, he might have been stuck for far longer.

The man, 87 according to reports, suffered no injuries and did not need to be transported to the hospital.

Monday’s heat index rose above 110 degrees for the third day in a row, and Montgomery County Fire and Rescue crews were called out on numerous incidents and accidents.

Two dogs barking got the attention of a passing bicyclist and persisted until the bicyclist found their owner, 87, who was so stuck in the mud it required rescue workers and special tools to get him free. Here the dogs enjoy a well deserved drink with their owner’s mud covered legs visible behind them.

Hiker Dies from Heat On Billy Goat Trail

A hiker died Saturday, July 20, from hypothermia while on the main section of the famous Potomac Billy Goat trail. Montgomery County Fire and Rescue performed CPR on Rachel Parkerson, 32 of Severn, after responding to a report of an unconscious female on the trail. Other hikers and people close to the trail assisted Parkerson, and guided more than a dozen rescue workers to the scene on Saturday, the second of three days with heat index over 100 degrees. Swift water rescue teams from Cabin John Volunteer Park Fire Department extracted her from the rough terrain and Park Police hoisted Parkerson by helicopter to Suburban Hospital where she died.

Park Police say the cause of death was accidental with hyperthermia being the attributing factor.

Montgomery County Fire and Rescue responded to nearly a dozen other calls from the same area on Sunday.

During the heatwave, the Billy Goat Trail has been closed at times, and authorities urge hikers to have sufficient water to stay hydrated, at least two liters per person. The Park Service strongly discouraged anyone from hiking on the Billy Goat trail between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. in the heat.

According to Fire and Rescue, dangerously high temperatures and humidity can quickly cause heat stress or heat stroke if precautions are not taken. Use caution when visiting the park. Avoid strenuous outdoor activities. Check the weather before planning your trip.

Even in favorable weather, Billy Goat section A is challenging and dangerous. A sign in early parts of the trail says: “Difficult Trail Ahead. Many hikers are injured every year on this section of the Billy Goat A trail. The terrain includes sharp drops, requires jumps across open areas, walking along the edges of rocks and a climb up a 50-foot-traverse. Beyond this point, the next available exit is at the midpoint, up to an hour hike over difficult terrain. If you are tired, low on water, or unprepared for a very strenuous hike, please turn back.”

Hiker with medical emergency on Billy Goat Trail Saturday has died, officials say.

The Billy Goat Trail is divided into three sections, with section A being the most difficult.

Climbing the traverse, 50 feet of sheer rock, is part of the Billy Goat Trail section A, shown here in a file photo. This is near where Rachel Parkerson, 32, was found unconscious. Parkerson died of hyperthermia.
With the sunny days of mid-summer come sweltering heat. This week’s heat indexes topping 110 degrees in some cases illustrate that July and August are the hottest months of the year, according to the National Centers for Environmental Information.

Soaring temperatures may have the greatest impact on those who are over the age of 65. “They are more likely to have a chronic medical condition that changes the normal body’s responses to heat,” said Amy Vennett, BSN, RN, Program Manager and Nursing Case Management for Arlington County. “Older adults don’t adjust as well as young people to sudden changes in temperature. They’re more likely to take prescription medicines that affect the body’s ability to control its temperature or sweat.”

The physical, cognitive and social changes that happen as one ages, make one more susceptible to illnesses related to extreme heat, says Ingrid Parkhurst, Center Nurse Coordinator and Gerontologist for the Fairfax County Health Department. “So, when it comes to the heat, we need to think about all three perspectives. Physically, older adults might overheat, sunburn and dehydrate more easily given changes to their bodies. Cognitively, older people are more likely than the general population to suffer from some mental decline, [and] they may not be able to communicate their needs in the heat as readily, leaving them open to dehydration and heat-related illnesses.”

Vennett says that the signs that might signal the onset of such an illness include “Heat stroke, heat exhaustion, heat cramps, sunburn, and heat rash.”

Local counties offer help during times of extreme heat, says Brian Roberts of the Montgomery Health and Human Services Department. “Anyone who needs to get out of the heat can take advantage of the cooling centers like senior centers during normal business hours.”

Staying indoors during the hottest parts of the day is the most obvious way to prevent illnesses, says Vennett. “If you do spend time outside, wear lightweight, loose-fitting clothing. Drink plenty of non-alcoholic fluids like water, even if you’re not thirsty.”

“Stay ahead of your thirst,” continued Vennett. “On days with heat advisories, take sips from a water bottle all day. If you feel sick, see your physician. Older adults can have multiple health problems at once, and dehydration can affect any of these.”

Some older adults go through social changes that could leave them isolated and unable to seek help before reaching the point of an extreme heat-induced illness, says Parkhurst. “That is dangerous because if they do not have social connections it will be harder for them to access the care they need, especially in an emergency,” she said. “Those who are isolated or lack the physical ability to drink adequate amounts of water or recognize thirst are at greater risk. And, dehydration easily leads to urinary tract infections in older adults.”

Drinking plenty of non-alcoholic fluids like water, even if you’re not thirsty can help prevent heat related illnesses.

- Seeds standing in front of the Infusion Center’s entry door, waiting for an oncology nurse to call. New patients names are called and on and on and on...you’re treated, you’re out. And when you’re out, you got ’em.

Upon hearing their names, the two patients with nearly a dozen of their supporters got up and moved eagerly toward the entry door. It reminded me of the beginning of “The Price Is Right” when four audience members’ names are called in quick succession and imploded to “Come On Down!” by George Gray (Johnny Olson, the original announcer) for forty-odd years ago and officially become one of that day’s contestants.

However, once inside the Infusion Center, it’s dead serious.

You’re at stake, maybe even at risk, depending on where you are. Especially in the Oncology Unit, the place where my husband is being treated. It’s where they treat cancer patients. This is where you’ll see people walking with canes or sitting on chairs. It’s where you’ll see people sitting in wheelchairs.

My husband was recently sent to the Infusion Center for his chemotherapy. He was there for four hours.

The chemotherapy is given in a large room. There are multiple oncology nurses and a nurse manager to attend to the patients, along with their family and friends – all of whom are encouraged to attend.

In the midst of this crowd, I sat and waited. We hadn’t exactly been assigned numbers, but we were assigned oncology nurses and therefore could only enter the Infusion Center with their assistance.

Then, with all of us “waiters” looking at the entry door, waiting for an oncology nurse to walk in and call our names. The door locked clicked open and out walked two oncology nurses. As soon as they cleared the door and entered the waiting area, they called out their respective patient’s names (unfortunately not mine).

During the event, the two patients had extended hours on Fridays and Saturdays. Visit mrgocorec.com.
Art Appreciation

Art Show at Geneva Day School Invites Time Travel

Hands-on study of art history comes to life in art show, and student love of arts.

Geneva Day School hosted its 39th Art Show by transforming into a gallery of masterpieces generated by students over the course of the year both in classes and through specialized art programs. “This is a wonderful opportunity to showcase the innate artistic talents of children at all ages and give them an opportunity for expression,” said Director Suzanne Funk.

For decades, Geneva’s innovative, spiraling curriculum has provided Elements of Art to 3 and 4 year olds, Works of Wonder to PreKindergarten, and Art Through the Ages to Kindergarten. Each program creates enthusiasm for art by asking students to tap their senses, think critically, and imagine. Concepts such as lines, shapes, colors, textures, and spatial relationships are introduced in Elements of Art and then revisited the following years through a deepening exploration of what is visual and tactile.

By the time students are enrolled in PreKindergarten, they know to recognize repeating patterns in nature and apply such knowledge through replication of Native American Indian art. Kindergartners ecstatically explore Art through the Ages by donning their “time travel caps.” In September, they participate in a “dinosaur dig” to retrieve “prehistoric bones” and create rubbings. They soon visit the “era of the caveman” by examining primitive drawings. Through simple strokes of charcoal, they render their own stories on “cave walls.”

A visit to early civilization in Ancient Egypt spurs a study of the pyramids; students recreate funerary traditions by volunteering to be wrapped as mummies and then come to life again to tell their stories through friezes and hieroglyphics. Ancient Greek and Roman Art yield a discovery of vase, fresco, and tile-making processes just as Medieval and Renaissance Art provide a more intimate study of the Masters. Students paint the “Sistine Chapel ceiling” beneath tables lined with paper to replicate Michelangelo’s experience.

In an embrace of Modernity, students discover Impressionism, Pointillism, and Mondrian patterns, among other movements. They create landscapes, cityscapes, and seascapes, as well as abstract pieces that crescendo with Alexander Calder-esque mobiles and Jackson Pollock paint splattered canvases. One such gorgeous canvas the Kindergarten Class created collaboratively and offered for auction at the School’s Annual Fundraiser.

Earlier in the month, Kindergartners took a celebratory field trip to the National Gallery of Art where they revelled in seeing first-hand the works they had studied. Docents remarked how knowledgeable the students were, as they knew many secrets of the paintings. One such secret is that Jackson Pollock’s “Lavender Mist” is permanently embedded with an insect.

Likewise at the art show, current Geneva Day School students provided “tours” to hundreds of parents, extended family and friends during the event. Heightening this impression were student-musicians (some currently enrolled at Geneva and others graduated) who serenaded with their piano and violin-playing. Chloe Brokt, a 10 year-old violinist from Stone Ridge, traced love of her instrument to her earliest exposure to music at Geneva; a professional had played for her class and she was forever inspired.

At intervals, guests of all generations broke into dance and song. For more, see www.genevadayschool.org
