The Face of A Lifelong Love of Learning Geneva Day School

Whether conducting an experiment from behind a lab mask, gazing through a microscope or peering into a book, Geneva Day School students, aged two through kindergarten, turn a fresh face to a lifelong love of learning.

"Just as astronomer Edwin Hubble stated man explores the universe using his five senses and calls it Science, our students learn by looking, touching, hearing, smelling and tasting; this is our Science. We create lots of opportunities to explore the world," states Director Suzanne Funk about the school's innovative, age-appropriate programming.

Defined by ideal student-teacher ratio, a thematically-inspired curriculum includes literacy, art, music and movement, environmental education, field trips and outdoor play. Voted Best of Bethesda three times in the Bethesda Magazine Readers Poll, the school's approach to STEAM is a formula that places student scientists/authors/explorers first!
